

THE ORPHEUS.

The large audience assembled last night gave every demonstration that the new talent who made their first appearance were a welcome and pleasing addition to the present company. The Hartwell sisters, two charming blondes, performed some neat contortion dances; lithe, agile and graceful in every movement, they received a well merited encore. Miss Marion Brandes is a lady of splendid physique with an agreeable stage presence. Singing several pathetic love ballads in a sweet soprano voice, she showed considerable pathos, being called before the curtain. Dave Marion scored a hit in his costermonger song fairly fetching the house. The regular members were all well received and suffered no loss of prestige.
